Forecast For Northern Ireland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Wednesday 27 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cloudy but mostly dry by day. Rain from evening.

Today:
Some limited brighter spells during the morning, but otherwise rather dull with clouds thickening and lowering from the southwest through the afternoon, as winds turn to the east and freshen. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Tonight:
Periods of occasionally heavy rain spreading across Fermanagh, Tyrone and Armagh early evening, before reaching all parts late evening, and continuing overnight, as easterly winds increase to near gale force. Minimum temperature 2 deg C (36 deg F).

Thursday:
Cloudy with periods of rain which turn heavy at times. East to southeast winds strong, perhaps gale force, at first, easing gradually. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Cloud and rain early Friday clearing as dry and sunny conditions develop. Saturday mainly dry, bright with light winds. Snow then rain spreading from west Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.